

Dandelion Participation

Obligations

- Participation in the dandelion project is restricted to United Nations recognised nations.
- Consent to participate is given by the executive branch of the government on behalf of the nation it represents.
- Through participation, the country agrees to enable its population, in totality without preferential treatment, to provide donations to the Dandelion Project, free of taxation, tariffs, excessive transfer fees or any other means in which the donation is reduced in value.
- All manufacturing rights provided to a participating country are held by the State as a distinct entity and not by a living person, nor political party.
- The manufacturing rights provided to participating countries may not be sold or held by other entities with exclusivity.
- All funds, as the result of taxation or revenue on the goods produced via the technologies described in the manufacturing rights, or through the funds gained through auctioning said rights, will be in the form of governmental revenue.
- All funds accrued through a participating country's exploitation of their manufacturing rights must be recorded and declared on an annual basis.
- Derivatives of the technologies obtained from the research undertaken by the Dandelion Project are subject to (XXX)

Privileges of benefaction:

- All countries which participate in the Dandelion Project are entitled to receive the manufacturing rights of any and all research conducted via the Dandelion Project.
- The manufacturing rights are retained for 50 years, after which they are automatically deemed as public domain and suitable for any use.
- Participating countries may, at their digression, lease the manufacturing rights to any company capable to producing said manufactured object that is registered in the participating country.
- || Citizens whom are recipients of the Poverty Alleviation Fund may have their received monies taxed under existing taxation law present in their country.

Role of the Banking Sector:

- Banks require to be 'hosted' by the participation country in which they are registered.
- All donations may be held for a maximum of 30 days before being transferred to the Dandelion project.
- Donations provided by the citizens may be collected as a lump sum to XXX up to a maximum of 30 days.

Banks are entrusted to prevent citizens donating to the Dandelion Project through multiple XXX